Gearing up for 2019 – Prioritizing mental health care in Washington state

Washington's mental health system is in crisis. Too many of our most vulnerable citizens are suffering with mental illness and substance addictions due to the lack of community behavioral health services. These barriers prevent patients from receiving the care they desperately need. In recent years, the Legislature's focus point was appropriately on fully funding education. Now it is time for lawmakers to provide that same level of attention and commitment to improving and reforming our mental health and addiction recovery systems. We must ensure that our mentally ill get the treatment they need and deserve.

We need to act now. The recent federal decertification of Western State Hospital by the Center for Medicaid and Medicare Services - and the over $50 million in federal reimbursement authority we lost with it - means we used the last of our mulligans.

We need to empower parents to help their mentally ill and addicted adult children living on the streets get the care they need, expand the mental health workforce, protect communities from the release of violent offenders and ban their placement in residential neighborhoods. We also need to bring high-quality mental health care into our schools and build the infrastructure needed to care for our mentally ill in their communities where their family and other supports live.

"Solutions are best when families and communities are empowered," said Sen. Steve O'Ban, R-University Place. "I am committed to working with my friends across the aisle to put the care of our mentally ill first. This is the session to make improving our mental health care system the top priority of our state."

"Our state faces a crisis in providing adequate, safe and effective treatment for people with mental illnesses," said Sen. John Braun, R-Centralia. "We know that treating people with mental illness in their community keeps them closer to their support network and improves long-term outcomes. Doing so requires us to provide more appropriate facilities to deliver a variety of evidence-based services throughout our state. Accessible community-based mental health care will reduce the use of jails, hospitalization and placement in Western Washington's overcrowded and failing state psychiatric ward by communities that have no other options. More appropriate local care then allows the state institution to focus on the most challenging and high-risk patients. An investment in helping people with mental illness goes beyond those being treated; it's good for their loved ones, keeps our communities safer and recognizes the humanity of all people in our state."

"We have an incredible opportunity here in Washington state to provide students identified to be at risk for suicide, substance abuse, including opioids, risk to others and mental health issues such as anxiety and depression, the care they need through tele-medicine," said Sen. Randi Becker, R-Eatonville. "Early identification and intervention is the key. It's high time that we identify mental illness in our students and get them the treatment they need and deserve."

“Prioritizing mental health care in Washington state” means...

- New guardianship to empower parents and other family members to rescue their adult loved ones from the ravages of drug addiction and severe mental illness.
- Reforms to expand the mental health and addiction recovery workforce.
- Expand proven accountability of violent offenders and ban placement in residential neighborhoods and adult family homes.
- Bring high-quality mental health care into our schools through innovative tele-health care, which can help prevent adolescent suicide.
- Enable people to receive more appropriate treatment closer to their support network and allow state institutions to focus on civil-commitment patients by asking voters to approve $500 million in bonds over ten years to expedite construction of community mental health treatment facilities throughout the state.

Prioritizing mental health care in Washington state means that this issue needs to be the Legislature’s top priority in 2019. Taking care of our most vulnerable is one of our primary duties. We need a bipartisan effort to keep our neighborhoods safe, take care of our sons and daughters and protect our neighborhoods.

Title: Relating to expanding the Reentry Community Safety Program

Background: The Offender Reentry Community Safety Program (ORCSP) was established in 1999 as the Dangerous Mentally Ill Offender Program.¹ ORCSP identifies prisoners with serious mental illness within six months of release from prison who pose a potential threat to public safety. ORCSP uses a partnership between the Department of Corrections (DOC), Health Care Authority (HCA), and contracted community behavioral health providers to provide enhanced case management, treatment, and other services to these offenders following release.

A series of studies by the Washington State Institute for Public Policy (WSIPP) concluded that ORCSP reduces new felony recidivism by 42 percent and new violent felony recidivism by 36 percent.² WSIPP currently identifies ORCSP as a cost-effective program which returns $1.90 of benefits to taxpayers for every dollar spent on the program.³ A meta-analysis of 59 reentry programs published by WSIPP in 2017 revealed that ORCSP has the largest effect size in reducing recidivism than any other reviewed program, twice as large as the next most effective program.⁴

What the bill does:

- Renames ORCSP as the Reentry Community Safety Program (RCSP).
- Expands the RCSP to include state hospital patients who are committed as incompetent to stand trial following commission of a violent felony (known as "1114 patients" based on [E2SHB 1114 \[2013\]](#)) and state hospital patients who are committed based on criminal insanity.
 - Requires the Department of Social and Health Services to model the expanded RCSP off the current ORCSP in consultation with behavioral health experts, DOC, and HCA.
 - Redirects current monies appropriated for 1114 patients to support the RCSP expansion.
 - Requires notification to the Public Safety Review Panel (PSRP) and information sharing with PSRP when state hospital patients are referred to the program.
 - Authorizes community corrections officers to supervise 1114 patients participating in the RCSP and provides training.
- Requires all behavioral health organizations and fully-integrated managed care entities to ensure adequate provider capacity in their region to support the operation of the RCSP.
- Allows RCSP staff, agency staff, or state hospital staff to accompany a state hospital patient on temporary leaves from custody.

¹ The program has also been known as the Community Integration Assistance Program. It was renamed ORCSP by the Legislature in 2009 (see [SHB 1201 \[2009\]](#)).

Title: Create an innovative tele-health care delivery model in schools to prevent school violence, adolescent suicide, and substance abuse. Implement a high quality training program for school professionals.

What the bill does: The goal is to start treatment at early onset by identifying those that may need visits through telemedicine and those that need to have more in-depth treatment. Our goal is not just to make good patients but to make patients better and that will be done through measuring the effectiveness of these treatments and making adjustment to training and treatments to continue the focus on patient improvement.

1. The identified agency will undertake a digital survey of each school district to ascertain their specific needs along with the community's structure and available services.
2. The bill will address identifying and treating youth from 8-9th? Grade to graduation.
3. Risk Focus:
 - Mental Health
 - Suicide prevention and harm to others
 - Substance abuse, including opioid abuse
4. Training is the key to identifying above described conditions. Training shall be provided through project Echo based at the University of Washington. Criteria for training shall be developed within the mental health community and shall address all identified areas in #3.
5. Schools currently have employees that can be trained to help identify students demonstrating symptoms at their level of training. Administration, school bus driver's counselors, teachers, food service workers, janitors shall participate in digital based training provided by project ECHO.
6. Students identified from a trained school employee or a community worker shall have access to two telehealth treatments. If determined a student needs additional treatment a referral to the telemedicine program based at the University of Washington shall be made and paid for by insurance carriers, commercial and Medicaid alike while the student remains on the school campus.
7. Funding: The state shall apply for grants to fund said training through project ECHO through various entities. Funds shall be distributed through requirements. State will participate in funding.

Title: Relating to expanding community-based behavioral health facilities through issuance of state bonds

What the bill does:

- Authorizes the State Finance Committee to issue up to $500 million in general obligation bonds to finance community-based mental health facilities;
 - $500 million outside of the debt limit and subject to a vote of the people.
 - Provides that the bonds would be issued over ten years.
 - Directs the Secretary of State to submit the bond authorization to a vote of the people.

Why the bill is needed:

- The Legislature and Governor's agreed upon plan is to move long-term civil commits out of Western and Eastern State Hospitals and into community facilities
 - This allows civil commitments to be treated closer to their support systems.
 - Currently, we do not have adequate bed capacity in local communities
 - In order to establish and maintain capacity, we need to provide financing for the capital build out of our community mental health facilities
- Allows the state to focus on forensic mental health services at the state hospitals
- Helps address local need for mental health services; community facilities will allow for quicker treatment, easier access for families, and will help with diversion away from the justice system.
